Springfield, Illinois, November 30, 2005 - Harold O'Shea Builders, general contracting firm has completed construction on the region's first business continuity center. EOS Business Services, a sister company to Springnet1, will provide clients in downstate Illinois with a fully-equipped business continuity facility for testing and recovery, a necessary component to sustain a business before, during and after a business disruption.

The new 4,500 square foot facility is located at 6900 Preston Drive in Piper Glen. The new building features offices for EOS and Springnet1 along with additional office space for business continuity clients and a conditioned computer server room. To ensure the safety of all clients, access to this space requires a password and biometric verification process. The Business Continuity Center will provide business owners, CEO's, CFO's and CIO's with peace of mind knowing their computer and telecommunication systems can be replicated and tested for a prompt recovery should a business disruption occur. Michael E. O'Shea, president of Harold O'Shea Builders says, "This project was mutually beneficial for both EOS and O'Shea in that O'Shea was able to provide EOS with construction services to accommodate their needs and EOS was able to provide O'Shea with a product that would benefit our company in the event of a disaster. The reassurance of knowing that our business would continue with no interruptions was a key factor in our decision to become a customer of EOS Business
